

What Can You Build Here?

JOIN CALGARY'S LARGEST INNOVATION COMMUNITY

BY ANDREA MENDIZABAL

Great minds and ideas come together at the Alastair Ross Technology Centre (ARTC), a 120,000-square-foot facility that brings Calgary's largest concentration of innovation-driven enterprises and startups into one place.

Located in the University Research Park, the ARTC is a mixed office space that houses more than 100 tenants, virtual tenants and ecosystem partners from all areas of the innovation community.

"The ARTC is more than just a building," says Crystal Raymond, facilities director for the centre. "It gives you access to office space to suit your technology company's needs, all while connecting you to other entrepreneurs, resources and ecosystem partners that make up our innovation community."

The facility nurtures the physical presence and growth of its clients through central access to programs, workshops, mentors and community events. As an innovation hub, more than 300 industry, networking and education events are held at the ARTC each year making it the place for startups and entrepreneurs to collide, create opportunity and expand their network.

Small technology companies and consultants who need a business address and support services such as printing and meeting rooms can opt for virtual tenancy without leasing physical office space.

Early-stage startups that are ready to go from inspiration to market can lease coworking space at The Inc. to not only work in, but to also grow their idea into a viable business through mentorship, support and guidance.

"We are a great place to be for any tech startup wanting to establish themselves, broaden their network or receive mentorship," says Raymond.

What can you build here? To learn more about lease opportunities and how the Alastair Ross Technology

Centre supports innovation-driven companies, visit innovatecalgary.com/space-and-tenancy or contact artcfacilities@innovatecalgary.com. B